Vayetzei - וַיֵּצֵא

November 25, 2023 – 12 Kislev, 5784

When Rebecca heard that Esau was planning to kill Jacob once Isaac is gone, she told Isaac that she was not happy with the Canaanite girls. She would like to see Jacob go to her brother Laban in Haran and marry one of his daughters. Isaac calls Jacob and urges him to go to Haran. This Parasha begins with the words, "Vayetze Yakov Mi Beer Sheva—Vayelech Harana" - Jacob departed from Beer Sheva and headed towards Haran.

On his way to his uncle Laban's, when night falls, Jacob lays down and dreams of a ladder that stretches up from earth to heaven. He sees angels of God ascending and descending the ladder. God is standing over him and God blesses him and promises him that He will protect him on his journey. The next morning, Jacob sets up a memorial on the spot where he slept and calls it Bet El—the House of God.

When Jacob arrives in Haran, he goes to the community's well where shepherds gather to give water to their flocks and where the girls come to fetch water. He meets Rachel and finds out that she is Laban's daughter. He falls in love with her and makes a deal with Laban—that he would work for seven years for Laban, for the privilege of marrying Rachel.

Jacob, the guy who misled his father and received the firstborn's blessing in error, will have many deceits in his life. The first one is that Laban, on the night of the wedding, gives him Leah, Rachel's older sister, instead of Rachel for whom he worked for seven years. This is just the first of many deceits that Jacob will face.
